While crossing, thinking his reflection on the clean water of the river to be another dog, he said to himself, "If I snatch away this meat which is in the mouth of this dog then I shall have two pieces of meat." Falling in such greed, the moment he started opening his mouth to secure the meat, the meat from his mouth fell into the river and was swept away by the current. A Wiseman passed crossing the river, saying this "such plight occurs to those, who falling into greed, run after desire for imaginary gains."

  Man is a social animal. To live without society is impossible for man. During the age of history or pre-history, there was no instance of man being able to live without society. So the relation between society and man is not an artificial creation. This relation is fully natural and impulsive. Voluntary collection of more than one man with equal aim is called society. But though the society, in which man exists, is constituted of individuals but individuals have not constituted it. Because society as individual, is a natural creation. So it is said that society is as old as man. To live in society consists of the people guided by this impulse. Aristotle the legendary Greek philosopher thus, said, "Man is by nature a social animal".

Question 4 (20 Marks)

Write summary of any one of the following English passages within 70 words:

- (A)

In Indian society, marriage is still considered sacramental and eternal union. With changing times Indian society is opening its door for western culture and life styles, one of the most crucial episodes amongst it being the concept of live-in relationship especially in metropolitan areas. Unmarried partners living together or live-in relationship though not illegal, it is still considered in India as socially and morally improper. A change is visible in our society from arranged marriage to love marriage and now live-in relationship. As far as Indian scenario is concerned, there is dire need to recognize such relationship in form of new legislature that will clearly dictate the ambit of live-in relationship and rights and obligations of partners in such relationship. Marriage as institution has great legal significance and various obligations and duties flow out of marital relationship as per law. The right of a female partner in live-in relationship has become recognized by law. One of such legislation is Protection of women from Domestic Violence Act. They can also seek maintenance from their counterpart male partner under law.

- (B)

  Now Santosh had an old relation, a maternal aunt, who had some property. This she transferred to him by a deed on the understanding that she would be well looked after. So long as the deed remained unregistered, none was as obliging to the old lady as her nephew, none so considerate to her. Her every wish was anticipated and cheerfully carried out. But everything changed the moment the deed was registered. Santosh, who used to wait devotedly on his old aunt, now became supremely indifferent. His wife, Nirmala went even a further. She grudged even the little food that the old lady ate. No meal was now served to her without Nirmala cutting a satirical remark. The very bread that the aunt ate seemed to be seasoned with the meat of abuse. And this went on mounting. Nirmala would say, "How long is the old hag going to live? By giving few acres of waste land, she thinks she has bought us. We could have purchased a whole village with the money spent on her feeding."

Question 5 (15 Marks)

Question 4 (15 Marks)

Translate the following passage into Odia:

The environment is important for all living things. It gives us air to breathe and water to drink. Trees make the air clean and cool. Many animals, birds, and insects live in forests. But today, people are cutting many trees. This is not good for nature. Smoke from factories and vehicles makes the air dirty. Rivers are also getting dirty because people throw waste into them. If we do not care for nature, our future will be unsafe. Everyone should plant more trees. We should try to use less plastic. Plastic is bad for the soil and kills animals. Children should learn to keep their surroundings clean. We must save water and not waste it. A clean environment helps us live a healthy and happy life.

Question 5 (20 Marks)

Read the following passage and write a summary:

Childhood is a time when there are few responsibilities to make life difficult. If a child has good parents, he is fed, looked after and loved, whatever he may do. It is improbable that he will ever again in his life be given so much without having to do anything in return. In addition, life is always presenting new things to the child, things that have lost their interest for older people because they are too well-known. A child finds pleasure in playing in the rain, or in snow. His first visit to the sea side is a marvellous adventure. But a child has his pains. He is not so free to do as he wishes as he thinks older people are; he is continually being told not to do things, or being punished for what he has done wrong. His life is therefore not perfectly happy. When the young man starts to earn his own living, he becomes free from the discipline of school and parents, but at the same time he is forced to accept responsibilities. He can no longer expect others to pay for his food, clothes, and his room, but has to work if he wants to live comfortably. If he spends most of his time playing about in the way that he used to do as a child he will go hungry. And if he breaks the laws of society as he used to break the laws of his parents, he may go to prison.

Write a precis of the following paragraph within 1/3 words:

Artificial Intelligence has become one of the most significant technologies of the twenty-first century, influencing almost every aspect of human life. From virtual assistants that answer simple questions to advanced machines that can diagnose diseases, AI is steadily transforming the way people live and work. In many industries,

AI systems are used to analyze huge amounts of data within seconds, helping organizations make better and faster decisions. The use of AI in transportation, such as self-driving cars and smart traffic systems, aims to reduce accidents and improve safety. In education, AI-based tools assist students in personalized learning by identifying their strengths and weaknesses. Despite its many advantages, AI also brings several challenges. Many people worry that machines may replace human workers in the future, leading to unemployment. There are also serious concerns about data privacy, as AI often depends on collecting large amounts of personal information. Another challenge is the risk of misuse, because powerful AI tools can spread misinformation or be used for harmful purposes. Therefore, while AI has great potential to improve human life, it must be developed and controlled responsibly to ensure that society benefits from its progress without facing unnecessary risks.

Question 3 (20 Marks)

Write a summary of the following passage with a suitable heading:

One of the most troubling contradictions of our time is that approximately one-third of all food produced globally is wasted while nearly 800 million people suffer from chronic hunger. This paradox occurs at every stage of the food supply chain. In developing countries, inadequate storage, poor transportation infrastructure, and lack of refrigeration cause crops to spoil before reaching markets. In wealthy nations, supermarkets discard imperfect produce, restaurants over-prepare meals, and households throw away edible food due to confusion over expiration dates or simple overconsumption. The environmental impact compounds the tragedy: wasted food represents squandered water, land, energy, and labor, while decomposing food waste in landfills generates significant methane emissions contributing to climate change. Solutions exist but require systemic changes. These include improved storage facilities in developing regions, legislation requiring supermarkets to donate unsold food, consumer education about meal planning and food preservation, and technology connecting surplus food with those in need. Some countries have implemented successful programs reducing waste by 50% through such measures. Addressing food waste could simultaneously alleviate hunger, reduce environmental damage, and save billions in economic losses.

Health is the foundation of human happiness and productivity. In today's fast-paced world, people often neglect their physical and mental well-being. A balanced diet, regular exercise, and sufficient rest are essential for maintaining good health. Equally important is mental fitness, which involves managing stress and maintaining positive relationships. The rise of lifestyle diseases like diabetes, obesity, and depression shows how modern habits have affected health. Governments and NGOs now focus on public health campaigns to raise awareness about preventive care. Yoga, meditation, and community sports are gaining popularity as holistic approaches to wellness. Ultimately, health is not merely the absence of disease but a state of complete physical, mental, and social well-being. A healthy population contributes to a strong nation and a happier society and also living with a positive attitude and gratitude brings true happiness. Everyone should try to find and share happiness in daily life as well.
